

With support from the Norwegian Cultural Fund, Rangøya International Cultural Centre is able to offer a period of free residencies at the Norwegian coast.

The place: Nestled on Rangøya island, near the stunning Atlantic Ocean Road in Averøy, Norway, the residency takes place in a spacious old house featuring four bedrooms, two bathrooms, a shared kitchen, a cozy living room, and a small library. Each bedroom is equipped with a desk, and there is an additional separate working room. The nearest grocery store is located about 5 km away. Nearest airports are Kristiansund (KSU) and Molde (MOL). Position on map: rangoya.no/map.

The concept: The residency is specifically designed to create a meeting place between nations, as it is a condition that at least two nationalities are present. This call for residency applications in January, February, March or May 2026.

APPLICATION FORM: rangoya.no/apply

DEADLINE: December 1st

Please read the full conditions on the next page.

Application conditions

- Applications will be accepted from at least two writers applying together. They need to represent at least two countries or nations. The recommended maximum number of co-applicants is four.
- Multidisciplinary artistic cooperation is welcomed, but at least one of the applicants should work within literature.
- Recommended length of the residency is one month, but shorter stays can be agreed upon. The exact days are negotiated when the residency is granted.
- Residents may be invited to participate in cultural events or public readings. Blog entries or similar reflections about the residency are also encouraged.
- Applications will be reviewed by the Centre's artistic council, prioritizing them based on the applicants' professional achievements and merits, plans for the residency and potential contribution to the local cultural scene.
- All nationalities (including locals) are welcome to apply, but applications with a Nordic and/or Baltic connection may be prioritized.

Residency conditions

The stay is free of charge, but the scholarship does not include food, travel expenses or monetary remuneration. Use of other national or international sources of support is therefore highly encouraged.

If you are granted residency, a letter of confirmation will be issued, which can be used as documentation when applying for other support. Depending on the profile and plans of the residents, contacts with the local literary and cultural scene will be actively facilitated.

We reserve the right to extend the deadline and/or include additional groups of applicants. In such a case, the applicants will be informed.
